Keith Haring

Keith Haring wanted to make art that everyone could enjoy, even opening a 'Pop Shop' to sell posters, T-shirts and other pop art products. Haring said art is inside everybody; he began drawing at a very young age before learning cartooning from his father.

Keith Haring and Pop Art

Pop Art

Pop art is a style that creates artwork in ways often used by everyday items, such as advertising, comics and science fiction. It was designed to be enjoyed by everyone.

Pop art began in Britain in the late 1950s, and in the 1960s in the USA. It was most famous in the 1960s.

Untitled

Often used thick black outlines for his figures, filling them in with just one colour.

Untitled

Because Pop Art began so recently, its images are able to focus on newer ideas.
